What Do You Think of Japanese Question?

There having been a considerable amount of comment during the past summer regarding renting of houses in Ocean Beach to Japanese families, the Ocean Beach News columns will be open to articles of 500 words or less, from our subscribers. You may say what you wish, within reason, either for or against but please try and confine your selves to facts.

A SENSIBLE SOLUTION

Ocean Beach News,
Ocean Beach, California

Dear Editor:

The Japanese question is rather serious and one which concerns the beach as a community, since the community as a whole is affected. Granting all their good qualities, it would be a very happy solution if the Japanese could have a colony for themselves some where along the coast, where they could spend their vacation on the beach without paying a bonus in rent in order to get in.

Having lived for some years in a community where there were Japanese, Chinese and Mexicans among a large population of people of unusually broad intellect, culture and refinement, I found it to be fact, however inconsistent, that the cultured class deeply resented the brown people as neighbors. The property values did depreciate when these people came into the community. I know this to be the case in other communities as well. People who had money to invest went elsewhere to make their homes.

Having no race prejudice myself, I yet felt sorry to see many Japanese, Mexicans and a few negros taking possession of our beach last summer. People can not be forced to mingle with them. If they come, our most desirable tenants will go out—go to other beaches, so, take your choice.

During August and the first of September many people from Arizona and the Valley were almost begging for cottages and were turned away or charged an exorbitant price.

TWO HOUSES RANSACKED AT LOMA PORTAL

Sometime between October 15 and 18 the house of Paul A. Giraud, 3120 Goldsmith street, was entered while the family was away, the robber gaining entrance thru a bathroom window. More than three dozen pieces of silver were taken, other jewelry, watches, electric toaster, etc. The loot was of considerable value but not stated to police.

The James Mehaffey home, 3045 Browning street, was entered the night of October 17, the burglar using an iron bar to remove a window screen. The owners are away in the east on a six weeks trip and the loss was reported by Albert Johnson, who is looking after the property. Articles to the value of $325 are reported missing including a pair of binoculars, two portophones, revolver, blankets, knives, sweaters, a suit of clothes and other clothing.

KIWANIS MEMBERS ATTEND DISTRICT MEETING

San Diego and Coronado were hosts last Friday and Saturday to more than 1600 Kiwanians and their wives with a program of business for the men and entertainment for the women.

Frank L. Fox of Glendale was named district governor for 1935 for the California-Nevada district. Fred S. Kistemann, secretary-treasurer, of Oakland, was re-elected. William H. Westover of Yuma, Arizona, was elected lieutenant-governor of Division 11, which includes a small part of Arizona, Imperial and San Diego counties.

The ladies of Kiwanis have had no organization of their own but are planning a meeting for next Monday to organize an auxiliary club to be known as the "Kiwani-Annes."

At Wednesday noon luncheon this week each member who was able to attend the convention gave a short report on what interested him most. Herb Mohan was re-elected to membership after having withdrawn to join the South Pasadena club where he expected to be located, however, is now back at the San Diego Army & Navy academy. John Harrison of Ocean Beach Hardware was a guest of Rollin Reed.

Next week the meeting will be held as a "ladies night," with Dr. and Mrs. F. R. Felt as hosts. Kiwanians and their wives will gather at the Felt home, 4475 Del Monte avenue, Tuesday evening at 6:30 for dinner and an evening of entertainment.

DEBATE AT WOMEN'S CLUB

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

Edson R. Waite
Shawnee, Oklahoma

Talk seems to be the most expensive commodity that some people are willing to throw in towards the betterment of their home community.

Some people seem to think that a lot of the "New Deals" should be decently buried.

Business concerns that advertise their merchandise in this newspaper believe that the best is none too good for their customers.

Some people spend too much time thinking of their own importance and greatness with the result that they create wrinkles on their foreheads and start getting old too soon.

It is a grim fact that those cities who want prosperity to return in full measure must work hard to bring it back. The era of artificiality is past.

Peace has its roots in harmony—not in arms or alliances.

The live-wire, progressive and forward-thinking business men of your city are the type of men who believe in newspaper advertising. Newspaper advertising gives them an inspiration to do greater things and solves the problem of a quicker turnover of stocks.

A lot of people in this world think that something is wrong with everything. No matter how bright the present and future look, no matter how much brighter it could be made, they do their gloomy best to make it worse

It is said that a new era of common sense will soon be ushered in. However, much sanity and calm thinking is needed before that happy day arrives.

LOIS COLE MARRIED LAST FRIDAY EVENING

Last Friday evening, October 19, Miss Lois Eleanor Cole, was united in marriage to Garrett F. Middaugh, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Lee, 4410 Santa Monica avenue.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Hughes of Point Loma Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Mary E. Stoetzel played the wedding march, following which Mrs. Lillian Hartvigsen sang two solos, "Oh Promise Me" and "At Dawning."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cole of 4557 Brighton avenue. She is a graduate of Ocean Beach school and was a June graduate of Point Loma high. The bride was lovely in apricot organdy with blue satin girdle and trailing sash, and as the traditonal "something old" wore a gold brooch of her great-great-grandmother.

The groom is in Navy service, assigned to the U.S.S. destroyer Philip and the newlyweds will make their home in San Diego.

A number of family friends and girl school chums of the bride, had the pleasure of witnessing the wedding ceremony and to enjoy the dainty refreshments and brides' cake. The bride's table was spread with a very lovely ivory linen cloth, used at the wedding of the bride's mother.

While the acquaintance of the bride and groom has covered the past few years, the mother of Mr. Middaugh and the mother and father of the bride were schoolmates back in Michigan, some twenty years ago.

THANK DEMOCRATIC SUPPORTERS

We wish to thank the many merchants of Ocean Beach who donated prizes for our card party, also those who by their purchase of tickets and attendance helped to make the party a financial success.

Celebrate With Our Navy Saturday, October 27

Plans for a rousing Navy day celebration in San Diego, Saturday, October 27, have been completed by civic and patriotic organizations in cooperation with Rear Admiral W. T. Tarrant, district commandant, and Rear Admiral A. W. Johnson, senior officer present afloat.

Navy day in San Diego this year will be of special significance because of the transfer of the Atlantic scouting force destroyers, tenders and auxiliaries to that port, adding more than 40 ships to the fleet normally based there.

San Diego will be the only port on the Pacific coast to have a representative array of warcraft for Navy day. There will be about 30 cruisers, destroyers, submarines, tenders and other vessels in man-o-war row. All will keep open house.

One of the most interesting displays will be the insignia of various fighting, bombing, scouting and observations squadrons and navigational, aerial photographic, engineering and aerological equipment in the ballon hanger at the naval air station.

There also will be two exhibition flights, one at 10:30 a. m. and the second at 2 p. m. Giant seaplanes of the aircraft squadrons, base force, the same ships of the air that took part in the navy's recent Alaskan and Aleutian island survey, will be seen in action.

Guides will be available on all ships and shore stations and all residents of San Diego city and county and particularly school children are invited by the naval authorities to visit the naval units.

Warships that will be open for inspection Navy day in San Diego harbor include: Cruiser Cincinnati; aircraft tender Wright; submarine tender Holland; submarines Cachalot, Bass, Bonita, Barracuda, Narwhal and Nautilus; destroyer tender Altair, station ship Rigel, mine sweeper Sandpiper and destroyers King, Brooks, Trever, Kane, Borie, Hatfield, Perry, Buchanan, Evans, Wickes, Phillip, Twiggs, Pruitt, Sicard, Alden, Broome, Zane, Wasmuth and Lamberton.

The official program at shore stations is as follows: Naval training station—Open for visitors from 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Dress parade 10:15 to 11 a. m. Band concert, 11 a. m. to 11:30. Athletic 1 to 2:30 p. m. Band concert 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. Dress parade 3 to 3:30 p. m. All schools at the station will be open for visitors. Guides will be available at the main gate. Naval air station —Open to visitors from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. Guides will be available at the administration building. Moored to the naval air station pier will be the U.S.S. Wright, flagship of Admiral Johnson.

Marine Base—Open to visitors from 1 to 4 p. m. The Sixth marines will have a battery on the parade ground wiih tractors and panels for air ground communication. Nearby will be a machine gun unit. Second signal company will have on display in front of barracks No. 7, radio, signal flags and field telephone equipment. Headquarters company will have an exhibit of equipment carried by a marine infantry company in the field. A regimental parade will be held at 4 p. m.

Destroyer Base—Open to visitors from noon to 5 p. m. The station ship Rigel and all ships in commission will full dress ship from 8 a. m. until sunset. Searchlight display of all ships from 8 to 8:30 p. m. A torpedo and a depth charge will be on exhibition in building No. 36.

Naval hospital—Open to visitors from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Naval supply depot—Open to visitors from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

NOORDA BROS. BAKERY INCREASE THEIR HELP

Noorda Bros. Ocean Beach Bakery have this week added an expert baker who will specialize on pastry and better cakes. The new man is Joe Peters who comes from La Jolla where he was in charge of the bakery department of the H. & R. Grocery for 1½ years and about the same time with Fay's Bakery there.

The Noorda's have always put out quality merchandise and with a new baker and an expert saleslady, Gertrude Neubauer, they expect to be abel to give their customers a sufficient supply of highly satisfactory baked goods.

SEPTEMBER BEVERAGE TAX IS $151,071.10

Sacramento, October 22—California wines are in brisk demand, according to State Board of Equalization beverage tax assessments announced here today.

Sales of local vintages subject to the State tax of 2 cents per gallon for the month of September amounted to 1,216,050 gallons, marking an increase of 126,649 gallons over similar sales for August. Comparative figures for September, 1933 are not available because the sale of wine except that of low alcoholic content was not legalized until last December.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

SPANISH GOVERNMENT CRUSHES NEW CATALAN REPUBLIC—CCC TO BE CONTINUED.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©, Western Newspaper Union.

CIVIL war in Spain was precipitated by the radical elements, starting with a 24-hour general strike which was declared by the Socialists and Communists in answer to the formation of a conservative government by Premier Alejandro Lerroux under the domination of reactionary Catholics. Within a few hours bloody conflicts broke out in many regions, and Catalonia, the northeast corner of the country, decided this was the time to establish itself as an independent republic. Luis Companys, president of the state, announced: "Catalonia is breaking off relations with the rest of Spain. I demand complete discipline from everyone." He called on Gen. Domingo Batet, commander of the garrison at Barcelona, to swear allegiance to the new regime, but that wily soldier sparred for time, and before an hour had passed he received orders from Madrid to declare a state of siege. His troops battled with the Catalans, and soon had Companys and his fellow leaders cooped up in the presidential palace. Reinforcements for the government forces arrived swiftly by land, sea and air.

Luis Companys

Then the artillery opened up, and after the palace had been thoroughly shelled, Companys and his colleagues surrendered and were marched to a prison ship in Barcelona harbor. The revolution was over and the new Catalan republic went out of existence. It was rumored the collapse was partly due to a dispute between Companys and former Premier Manuel Azana, a co-leader in the revolt. Azana was reported to have escaped from the country.

Surrender of Companys did not end the fighting in northern Spain, for the revolutionists in various regions continued their desperate efforts, but the government considered the revolt really had been suppressed. There was no telling how many had been killed or wounded, but certainly the casualty lists were terribly long.

For a long time Catalonia, a hotbed of radicalism, has sought separation from the rest of Spain, and there is no reason to suppose that the stormy Catalans will now be submissive. But for the present they are beaten.

DIGNITARIES of the Roman Catholic church from many lands and pilgrims by the hundred thousand gathered in Buenos Aires, Argentina, for the thirty-second International Eucharistic congress. Ship after ship entered the harbor laden with pious folk from Europe, Africa and all the Americas, and the city threw open its homes for their accommodation. The picturesque open air ceremonies were held in Palermo park, and other religious rites were celebrated in the magnificent cathedral.

GOV. GIFFORD PINCHOT of Pennsylvania has in the past been in sympathy with much of President Roosevelt's program, but he has now definitely broken away by coming out in favor of the re-election of Senator David A. Reed, anti-New Deal Republican whose defeat would be most welcome to the administration. Immediately after Pinchot announced his stand in a speech at Wilkes-Barre, Postmaster General Farley conferred with Mr. Roosevelt and then, as chairman of the Democratic National committee, gave out a stinging attack on Pinchot. In it he referred to Senator Reed as "perhaps the most outstanding foe of the President's policies," who, if elected, would "do everything in his power to hamper the President's program and to make a misdeal out of the New Deal."

Gov. Pinchot

It is said that the Pennsylvania Democrats are importuning the President to take a hand personally, and perhaps make a speech in the state, in an effort to win over rock-ribbed Pennsylvania and retire Senator Reed in a defeat which could also be constituted as a slap at Pinchot and Andrew W. Mellon.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has made it plain that the Civilian Conservation corps, one of the least criticized features of his recovery program, is to be continued indefinitely. He wrote to Robert Fechner, director of the corps, saying:

"I have been greatly interested and encouraged by the fine report from your visits to CCC camps in many parts of the country.

"This kind of work must go on. I believe that the nation feels that the work of these young men is so thoroughly justified and, in addition, the benefits to the men themselves are so clear that the actual annual cost will be met without much opposition or much complaint."

Mr. Fechner had reported to the President that the cost of the CCC during its eighteen months of operation had amounted to $443,000,000.

The present authorized enrolled strength is 369,838, and enlistment of 100,000 is now under way to fill vacancies resulting from discharges. Fechner said 10,000 were dropping out each month to take private jobs.

USE of the taxpayers' money for the government operation of factories in competition with private enterprise was condemned by the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers, which acted on petitions received from seventeen large trade associations. The manufacturers assert that such government experimentation merely results in depriving employees in private industry of their jobs, creating employment at one point and unemployment at another.

"Entrance of the government into the manufacturing business in competition with its own citizens," says the manufacturers' statement, "even to supply relief for the unemployed, constitutes an extravagant use of the taxpayers' money in further experimentations.

"Where those in distress cannot be provided with either public or private work for which they could be paid, then public funds may legitimately be used to provide relief of actual need on a subsistence basis. But to furnish necessities required through government operated factories is the wrong way to do the right thing."

MARINE Workers' Industrial union, a "left wing" organization, called a strike of crews of "all American ships sailing out of North Atlantic and Gulf ports," and the union officials said 35,000 men would quit work. The demand is for $75 a month and a 33 per cent increase in the manning of vessels.

The strike call was issued in defiance of the International Seamen's union, which is negotiating with the steamship owners for a new wage and working hour schedule.

DELEGATES to the American Federation of Labor convention in San Francisco adopted unanimously and with cheers a resolution proposing legislation of a six-hour day and five-day week for all workers, private and government.

William Green

A committee appointed to investigate possibilities and merit of shorter work periods reported favorably.

William Green, president of A. F. of L., made an impassioned speech in favor of shorter work periods during which he said the federation can be expected to mobilize its economic strength to make a concerted drive on industry and owners of industry for adoption of a six-hour day and five-day week and that, legislation by congress would be sought at the forthcoming session so that there will be enforcement of this economic reform, not to make less work for those already employed but to create work opportunities for more people.

Resolutions as adopted provide for no reduction in wages to result from shorter work periods. Also resolutions opposing inflation of the currency, demanding equal representation with employers on NRA boards and viewing the "crushing national debt with alarm and misgivings" were adopted.

CONFERRING with the full membership of the new national industrial recovery board headed by S. Clay Williams, President Roosevelt let it be known that he was far from satisfied with NRA enforcement in the past and asked the board to devise more vigorous and effective methods.

Price-fixing and production control were discussed but not at length and with the general understanding that, although price-fixing policies of the Johnson regime would be reversed on paper, no sweeping action would be taken to upset existing codes and any action at all would come slowly.

REMODELING of the NRA by the new industrial recovery board which has displaced General Johnson is under way. One of the board's first official acts was to give a good job to Kilbourne Johnston, son of the retiring administrator—though he spells his name differently. The young man, who is an army lieutenant on leave, was made acting divisional administrator in charge of manufacturing codes.

Lloyd Garrison, thirty-eight-year-old head of the national labor relations board, announced his resignation and said he would return to his post as dean of the law school of the University of Wisconsin.

On behalf of the textile workers Francis J. Gorman formally accepted the President's plan for an industrial truce. He suggested a six-months' armistice and promised that during that period the union would permit "no stoppage of work" in protest against any findings of the textile or national labor relations boards.

"THE voice of Hauptmann is the voice I heard in the cemetery that night when the $50,000 ransom was paid," said Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to the grand jury in Trenton, N. J., after he had listened to the suspect in the kidnaping and murder case. The grand jury accepted this as clinching testimony and returned an indictment against Bruno Hauptmann, charging murder.

The words "Hey doctor. Over here, doctor" were spoken by the man who got the ransom money from Lindbergh's intermediary, Dr. John F. Condon. They were spoken in the cemetery where the payment was made. Lindbergh heard them and remembered the voice.

ONCE more talk of war with Russia is agitating Japan, stirred up by a remarkably frank pamphlet put out by the Japanese army department.

"Soviet Russia possesses 3,000 war planes, the United States 3,000 and China, 500," the pamphlet asserted. "If these nations combined, the air forces of the powers surrounding Japan would total more than 6,000 planes.

"Although diplomacy can give assurance that we will meet only one enemy, we must assume that the enemy will have at least 3,000 planes. Japan has only 1,000 planes. Can our armaments be said to be complete with this poor air force?

"Constant trouble along the Soviet-Manchukuan frontier, the increasingly challenging attitude of the Soviets and Russia's traditional unreliability make the future of Russo-Japanese relations uncertain."

THE world air congress convened at Washington, and one of the most important events on its program was the award to Wiley Post of the International Aeronautical Federation's annual gold medal for the outstanding aviation feat of 1933. For his solo flight around the world Post was chosen over Marshal Italo Balbo of Italy, the Lithuanian-American ocean flyers, Darius and Girenas, and J. V. Smirnoff, heroic Holland-Dutch East Indies mail pilot.

The judges who made the award took into consideration that Post flew 30,000 kilometers day and night, alone, over land and sea; covered an average of 3,700 kilometers per day; maintained an average speed of 100 kilometers an hour; and established, unassisted, a round-the-world record of eight days.

HARVARD university doesn't like Chancellor Hitler's treatment of Germany's educational institutions. Dr. Ernst F. S. Hanfstaengl, Hitler's confidential aid and himself a graduate of Harvard, made an offer to the university of a German traveling scholarship, but it was declined.

James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, said in a letter to Hanfstaengl:

"We are unwilling to accept a gift from one who has been so closely associated with the leadership of a political party which has inflicted damage on the universities of Germany through measures which have struck at principles we believe to be fundamental to universities throughout the world."

FOLLOWING the recommendations of a special committee appointed by the War department and headed by Newton D. Baker, the department has created a general headquarters air force, comprising all the air combat forces, and placed it under the direct command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff. Thus all the fighting planes are taken away from Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the air corps, and he is left in command of only the army air schools and air depots. "Benny," who flew with the Wrights in 1909 and worked his way to high command, has long been at outs with the general staff, struggling against what he considered its intrigues and politics.

Gen. Foulois

Just as this order was issued Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, former chief of the air corps and a perpetual storm center, was testifying before the commission appointed by the President to study the government's aviation problem.

Mitchell called the organization of a "GHQ" air force "a lot of bunk," and he declared that all army officers who signed the Baker report should be "kicked out of the service." He referred to army aviation plans as the work of "Boy Scouts" in the War department.

According to Mitchell, these are the measures the country should adopt for its aerial defense:

Merge army, navy, and all air services under one command.

Build planes with a cruising radius of 6,000 to 8,000 miles.

Make detailed plans for war, including the evacuation of New York city in case of an air attack by Japan "from a base in Alaska."

Construct dirigibles, for 50 of them "competently" handled could destroy Japan within two days.

ATTORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS has called a national conference to discuss crime which is to open in Washington December 3 and continue three days. President Roosevelt is to address the first session in Constitution hall. The conference will be invited to give broad and practical consideration to the problem of crime in these principal aspects:

1. Causes and prevention of crime.
2. Investigation, detection, and apprehension of crime and criminals.
3. Criminal courts and prosecution.
4. Detection, parole, probation, and pardon.

SAMUEL INSULL and sixteen of his former associates in public utilities are now on trial in the federal court in Chicago. They are charged with having used the mails to defraud investors through the sale of $143,000,000 in securities of the Corporation Securities company. Judge James H. Wilkerson is presiding over the trial and United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green heads the force of prosecutors. Selection of the jury didn't take long, but it was certain the trial of the case would consume weeks for the witnesses are numbered by hundreds.

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH
BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

HEALTHY HEARTS FOR YOUNGSTERS

THE deaths from heart disease during childhood can be divided into two groups. During the first year of life they are usually the result of a congenitally deformed heart. There is a structural deformity in the heart and these babies do not live until their first birthday. Nothing can be done to help them.

After the first year the heart diseases are due to bacterial invasions of the heart and can be thought of as direct heart poisoning. The deaths from this cause begin to be more frequent after the first three years of life. This period, up to puberty, is the time when the infectious diseases, such as diphtheria, scarlet fever, and measles are most prevalent. This is also the period in which children have frequent head colds and sore throats.

The tonsils and adenoids are accumulations of lymph tissue at the back of the nose and in the throat. The bacteria growing in the nose and throat during head colds and sore throats become lodged in the adenoids and tonsils. This causes an enlargement of these lymph glands and the enlarged adenoids lead to the typical mouth breather because they close up the back part of the nose and make breathing through the mouth easier than through the nose. After the head cold or sore throat disappears, we can still oftentimes find numerous disease-producing bacteria in the enlarged tonsils and adenoids. Many of these bacteria belong to the group of germs called streptococci. One of the main reasons why physicians recommend the removal of enlarged tonsils is because they contain bacteria that are very harmful to the individual.

Infectious heart disease is due to an infection of the heart by bacteria. These bacteria usually pass from the nose and throat into the body and lodge in the heart. Rheumatic fever belongs to this group of heart diseases. Joint pains, muscle pains, chorea or St. Vitus dance, are all part of a rheumatic fever picture. Severe sore throat with fever, followed by enlargement of the glands in the side of the neck, are indications of infection of the throat with a group of bacteria capable of causing heart disease under certain conditions.

Young children with heart disease need absolute rest in bed until the acute symptoms subside. This is difficult to do because these children are not in pain and naturally want to play. But they become easily exhausted and the heart condition may become gradually worse until permanent damage is done. Many of the deaths from heart disease in the first decade of life are due to neglected cases of rheumatic fever with cardiac complications.

Heart disease sometimes follows diphtheria, scarlet fever and measles. Kidney trouble also follows these infectious diseases at times and is due to the same group of bacteria that cause cardiac damage. After a child recovers from any of these infectious diseases, the heart is sometimes weak for a few months but careful supervision will lead to recovery. In these instances the weakness is due to toxins poisoning the heart during the attack of the disease. If the heart is allowed to rest, little damage will result and the child will not be handicapped in future life by a weak heart.

The heart is made up of a network of muscle fibers that are joined to each other. These muscles contract about 72 times per minute, and they rest between each contraction. Thus they have a definite period of work and a definite period of rest. During fever, due to diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and sore throat, the heart beats faster than normal and hence the resting period between each beat is shortened. This causes an exhaustion of muscle fibers. It is just the same as if you worked 20 hours a day with only 2 or 3 hours rest.

After any illness associated with high temperature and fast heart rate, the heart should be examined to see that it has fully recovered from the strain. The child should not return to school the day after a spell of fever but should be kept in bed for a few days to allow the heart to rest. Strenuous muscular exercise, such as running, jumping and playing, will throw a tremendous strain on an already exhausted heart. Sometimes there is a fatal outcome immediately following such strenuous efforts made by the exhausted heart muscles.

It is very difficult to cure heart disease. It is much easier to prevent it and the prevention should start early in life. The first ten years is not too early to begin to take measures to insure a healthy, normal heart that will perform its functions properly for the next six or seven decades. A heart damaged during the first decade may lead to semi-invalidism during the fourth and fifth decades of life.

An over-strained heart muscle means that the heart beats rapidly and the resting period is too short for recuperation between beats. If this continues for days and weeks, the heart loses its force and can easily be permanently damaged unless proper precautions are taken. These precautions are rest in bed, a good diet and plenty of fluids until the beat returns to its normal periods of contraction and relaxation.

De La Salle and Momence Live Again

ON THE banks of the Kankakee river in 1679 the Indian chief Momence and his daughter, Janeer, greeted that bold young explorer, Robert Sieur de la Salle, and his faithful friend, Father Hennepin, and a French soldier. The other day the little city of Momence celebrated its centennial and the historic event was reproduced, as shown in this scene.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BUTCHER THE SHRIKE

"WHO is Butcher the Shrike?" asked Peter Rabbit.

"He's new to the Old Orchard," replied Skimmer, "and you probably haven't noticed him. I've often seen him in the South. There he is now, on the tip-top of that tree over yonder."

Peter and Johnny Chuck looked eagerly. They saw a bird who at first glance appeared not unlike Mocker the Mockingbird. He was dressed wholly in black, gray and white. When he turned his head they saw a black stripe across the side of his face and that the tip of his bill was hooked. These were enough to make them forget that otherwise he was like Mocker. While they were looking at him he flew down into the grass and picked up a grasshopper. Then for some distance he flew with a steady, even flight only a little above the ground, suddenly shooting up and returning to the perch where they had first seen him. There he ate the grasshopper and resumed his watch for something else to catch.

"He certainly has wonderful eyes," said Skimmer admiringly. "He must have seen that grasshopper way over there in the grasses before he started after it, for he flew straight down. He doesn't waste time and energy hunting aimlessly. He sits on a high perch and watches until he sees something he wants. Many times I've seen him sitting on top of a telegraph pole. I understand that Bully the English Sparrow has become terribly nervous since the arrival of Butcher. He is particularly fond of English sparrows. I presume it was one of Bully's children you saw in the thorn tree, Peter. For my part, I hope he'll frighten Bully into leaving the Old Orchard. It would be a good thing for the rest of us."

"But I don't understand why he fastens his victims on those long thorns."

"For two reasons," replied Skimmer. "When he catches more grasshoppers and insects than he can eat, he sticks them on those thorns so that later he may be sure of a good meal if it happens there are no more to be caught when he is hungry. Mice, sparrows, and things too big for him to swallow, he sticks on the thorns so that he can pull them to pieces more easily. You see, his feet and claws are not big enough to hold them while he tears them to pieces with his hooked bill."

"Does he kill many birds?" asked Peter.

"Not many," replied Skimmer, "and most of them are English sparrows. He is a good deal like Killy the Sparrow Hawk in this respect. Hello! Now what's happened?"

QUESTION BOX
By ED WYNN . . .
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I was riding in a trolley car yesterday. Sitting opposite me was a man reading a Texas newspaper. As he started off the car I saw a headline in his paper which read: "Well-Known Mexican Flees with $350,000." My curiosity is aroused, as I saw nothing in the New York papers about it. What do you know about it?

Truly yours,
NICK L. RIDE.

Answer: Don't believe it. Looks to me as if the Mexican government is trying to take the edge off the Florida boom and get the people to go to their country. It is true that Mexican "fleas" are well-known, but I doubt if they have any money.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a chap who lives next door to me and I absolutely know he is a bootlegger. He has a sign in front of his home which says he is a "Marine Attorney." Can you see any connection between the sign and what he does for a living?

Yours truly,
U. MAYNO.

Answer: My dear friend, I'm surprised at you. A "Marine Lawyer" is the same as a "bootlegger." A "Marine Lawyer" is a fellow who takes cases off ships.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you think traveling broadens one's mind? The reason I ask is, I have the opportunity to take a trip across the Atlantic and back again without getting off the ship. Do you think a trip of this kind will add any to my present knowledge.

Sincerely,
C. WEED.

Answer: If there is anything at all in a man, a fifteen-day trip on the ocean will bring it out.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a man living next door to me who drinks heavily and is nearly always drunk. I don't drink at all, yet I have only one-half the friends he has. How do you account for that?

Yours truly,
T. TOTALER.

Answer: You say he is always drunk. That's the reason. He sees twice as many people as you do.

Russia in the World War

Pre-revolutionary Russia had the only national anthem which contained as its chief note a prayer for peace. Yet, writes F. G. Taylor, Jr., New York city, in Collier's Weekly, when the World war came, no country mobilized more quickly. In fact, enthusiasm ran so high in Petrograd that a prize of $100,000 was raised as an award for the Russian who set foot in Berlin.

Do YOU Know—

That a jet black cat, riding the trucks of a crack Union Pacific passenger train from some point near Ogden, Utah to Chicago, won the distinction of being the world's first transcontinental cat. The distance covered was about 1,500 miles.

TASTY GOOD THINGS

Candy Apples.

To two cupfuls of sugar add one cupful of condensed milk, one-fourth of a cupful of butter, one cupful of corn sirup, mix and boil slowly, stirring constantly until a hard ball is formed when dropped into cold water. Remove from the fire and add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Set the sirup into a pan of hot water and dip the apples which are pierced with wooden skewers—dip once or twice if necessary—drain on a buttered baking sheet, roll in coconut or chopped nuts if desired.

English Tea Muffins.

Sift one cupful of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of soda, add one cupful of graham flour, one-third of a cupful of brown sugar, two beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of milk and one cupful of sour cream. Mix well and add one-half of a package of dates sliced. Bake in well-greased muffin pans in a hot oven. This recipe makes eighteen small muffins.

If you are out of pastry flour add two tablespoonfuls of corn starch to make a full cup with ordinary bread flour.

Garden Butter.

Take two tablespoonfuls each of chopped parsley and celery, two tablespoonfuls of chopped chives, one tablespoonful of chopped watercress and one teaspoonful of tarragon leaves. A bit of the vinegar may be used if the leaves cannot be obtained. Place in a chopping bowl with two hard cooked egg yolks, a tablespoonful each of chopped pickle and capers. Remove and press through a colander, add one-half cupful of butter, beat sharply with a wooden spoon for five minutes. Place in a jar in a cool place.

Orange Ambrosia.

Slice oranges and arrange in overlapping slices, sprinkle with sugar and coconut, serve in glass dishes.

The Romance of a Happy Marriage

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE romance of the "sheik," the glory
Of glamorous, mystic sands;
The allure of the unknown places,
The magic of foreign lands—
They can never approach the splendor
My Grandmother could recall!
The romance of a happy marriage
Is lovelier than all!

The romance of a "back street" lover,
The furtive, clandestine kind,
Could never be as satisfying
As love that I have in mind:
An affection that builds a future
As staunch as a granite wall!
The romance of a happy marriage
Is lovelier than all!

The romance that is only captured
In print or upon the screen
Is unreal when compared to unions
Of lovers that I have seen!
When two hearts are entwined together
No matter what may befall,
The romance of a happy marriage
Is lovelier than all!

Relics Found in Palestine

All that remains of an Egyptian town which flourished more than 3,000 years ago, on a site near the present city of Tel Aviv, Palestine, are a heart-shaped scarab, the sacred beetle of ancient Egypt, a fragment of an Egyptian seal used on a papyrus document and a few bronze and flint implements. The large stone scarab, which bears a hieroglyphic inscription of a passage from the "Book of the Dead," is the first of its kind to be found in Palestine. It was placed over the heart of a mummy and is believed to have come from the tomb of some Egyptian official.

Age 13
Old enough for strong drugs?

It is not wise to give a laxative of adult strength to a child, just because you give it less often or in less amounts.

Stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can often be traced to this single mistake.

There is a better way to relieve those occasional sluggish spells or constipation in a child of any age:

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Doctors advise liquid laxatives, and hospitals use the liquid form. Almost any child who has been convalescing in the hospital usually comes out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch.

Make the change now to pure, California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you won't risk any more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. Those little upsets and complaints just disappear as a rule and the child is soon normal and happy again.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

VOTE MORE WATER FOR SAN DIEGO

Declaring that the three water propositions to be voted on at the election Nov. 6 are vital to San Diego's future, and that approval of the items will mean water insurance for a long time, the United Citizens' Water committee has issued the following statement for the information of voters:

ALL-AMERICAN CANAL

"Full development of all water resources in San Diego County available for the city will produce an estimated 50,000,000 gallons daily—sufficient water for 500,000 population. Our rights to Colorado River water cover 100,000,000 gallons daily—enough for 1,000,000 new population.

"The federal government is financing the All-American canal at a cost of $30,000,000, of which San Diego's share is $450,000. San Diego is given 38 years in which to repay.

HODGES REINFORCEMENT

"The state engineer has ordered reinforcement of Hodges dam to provide maximum safety factors, otherwise the reservoir may be drained or the level lowered, which would cut off the city's 3,000,000 gallons daily supply.

"Estimated cost of the project is $162,000, but voters are asked to approve a bond issue for only $96,000. The remainder will be met by a federal grant of $46,000, and $20,000 in the city treasury which canbe applied to the cost.

"Another favorable factor is the San Diego Water Supply Co., successor to the San Dieguito Water Co., from which the city acquired the system of which Hodges Dam is a part, has co-operated with the city by agreeing to pay $88,000—$4000 annually for 22 years—toward cost of the project. These annual payments will be used to retire the bonds, so that in reality the cost of Hodges reinforcement will be $8,000, plus interest on the bonds at 4%.

"Should this proposition fail, the federal gift of $46,000 will be lost and the city eventually will have to strengthen Hodges dam and probably pay the entire cost.

EL CAPITAN PROJECT

"This project calls for construction of eight miles of pipeline from El Capitan dam to the city's pumping plant near Lakeside to connect with the pipeline already installed between the pumping station and San Diego.

"The original El Capitan dam plans provided for a masonry structure 160 feet high and the people voted for that project. Later experts agreed that a hydraulic fill-rock embankment dam 197 feet high, doubling the water capacity, would more satisfactorily meet the conditions, although the cost would be more. Voters in 1931 approved the more extensive program by a vote of 17,925 to 3,460.

"Cost of this project is $680,000, but voters are asked to approve a bond issue for only $350,000. The U. S. government will make a gift of $180,000. The balance will be made up by the surplus remaining in El Capitan bond fund on completion of the dam.

"Failure of voters to approve this bond issue will mean isolation of the dam, loss of the proffered federal grant of $180,000, and the prospect of paying at least 25% more when the pipeline eventually is built, as it must be if San Diego is ever to use El Capitan water."

JOIN IN CELEBRATING NAVY DAY

Saturday is Navy Day. This national celebration was insituted in 1922, falling on the birthday of the late Theodore Roosevelt, who is considered the father of the modern navy; although the first navy bill was introduced in the Continental Congress on October 27, 1775. The day's observance is to promote a more general knowledge of the Navy. One of the greatest assets to civilization is claimed to be a country's navy, for it is the big policeman guarding against intrusion from other "dogs of the sea," who invade with treacherous bombarding. The United States Navy is a model and necessary institution for protection, even at the heavy maintenance cost.

Educators and college trainers are seeking any source of radical teaching, such as seed sowing of communism which is so liable to creep into class rooms from those who are not thoroughly American. The state superintendent of public instruction made it plain at a recent gathering of college heads that a pledge hereafter is assential, pledging loyalty to the country that will give an expression of absolute allegiance to the United States of America and its government by every student and teacher and such should be required. He defined communism as a force, body or individual advocating the direct overthrow and destruction of the U. S. government. The presidents agreed that in the future, loyalty to our government would be a matten of greater importance in the teaching of every student in our California public school system.

When money does not flow freely in the channels of trade, it is sure to bring on the pinch of poverty and hard times. We have learned this in the past few years. It is the buying power that saves us and the Federal Government is seeking to make this a rule if in no other way than by pensioning old people. Through this plan, over 49 million wage earners would help stabilize the incomes of the country and bring the balance between production and consumption. It is when millions of persons suddenly cease buying—hard times come not only for them but for everybody. Without a doubt the pension formula is the only alternate for equalizing the social system and restoring stable times.

As election time draws near the strong arm of criticism is getting in its savage work. Old Diogenes, with his lantern, should find it easy searching for an honest man among candidates. Political excitement over principles of justice in government, is making the campaign one of refining fire. The candidate who cannot pass thru the crucible test should not take his defeat too hard; he should have kept out of the race, where only strictly honorable candidates are invited.

PROPOSITIONS 9 AND 17 SHOULD BE DEFEATED

Declaring chiropractic and naturopathic propositions 9 and 17 are class legislation and dangerous, the San Diego County branch of the Public Health League of California has issued the following statement for the information of voters:

"A new form of specially privileged groups will be set up in California if initiative propositons 9 and 17 are voted at the election Nov. 6.

"Proposition 9 would establish a State Chiropractic Association whose actions are completely removed from any control by the governor or legislature.

"Proposition 17 would create a similar all-powerful and autocratic Naturopathic Association.

"Existing professional groups label such class legislation as a dangerous precedent. Both propositions involve public health problems of serious importance to voters in that they would give chiropractors and naturopaths the rights and privileges of physicians and surgeons, including the practice of surgery, caring for women in child-birth, prescription of drugs and narcotics, caring for injured workmen under the workmen's compensation act, and equal privileges with licensed physicians and surgeons in county hospitals and all institutions supported wholly or in part by public funds.

"Officers of the California Chiropractic Association brand proposition 9 and 17 as not only useless legislation but two of the most dangerous proposals ever presented to the voters, and urge friends of real chiropractic and good government to assist them in defeating both measures."

SERA LABOR CANNOT BE USED AT BEACHES

SERA officials at San Francisco refused to sanction use of funds for cleaning beaches in San Diego, the council was informed by City Manager Buck today when Councilman Bennett urged the cleaning of Mission Beach and Pacific Beach ocean fronts. Bennett suggested that the beaches need cleaning after the summer season and that SERA employes could do the work without cost to the city. The city manager then stated he had taken up with SERA the same proposition and was turned down on grounds that it would be contributing to the maintenance of the beaches.—Tribune.

BEACH POLITICAL PARTIES COMBINE

The Republican-Democratic club of Ocean Beach, organized last week has joined the Ocean Beach Republican-Flag Democratic headquarters, 4994 Newport avenue, according to Rudolph Nagel and Charles H. Daly, in charge of the headquarters.

The new group has an executive committee composed of George Bryans, chairman; E. H. Bechtel, Andrew Ozmun, Fred W. Wallace, M. E. Bryans and Ellsworth F. Whalen. They have challenged the Ocean Beach EPIC group to a debate, in which Whalen will take the lead for his side.

Many citizens have called at the headquarters for literature and information during the last week, it is reported. The office will stay open in the evening until 9:30.

SEPTEMBER GASOLINE TAXES $3,157,674.39

Sacramento, October 22—Continuing a decline begun last June, the California gasoline tax for September amounted to $3,157,674.39 or $161,328.50 less than the same tax for the corresponding month of 1933. This was revealed here by John C. Corbett, State Board of Equalization member, upon completion of the Board's assessments of motor vehicle tax liability for the past month.

This "get acquainted luncheon" featured a seating plan of each table having a teacher, a board member and a room mother.

Halloween motifs of corn-shocks pumpkins and yellow blossoms were prettily arranged by Mrs. Ruth Bailey. Artistically inclined members of the board designed original place-cards for the teachers.

Richard Barbour, principal expressed his appreciation of the splendid cooperation the community, parents and friends of PTA groups are giving our elementary school.

Mrs. Don Horner stressed the need of nursing knowledge by the mother in the home. The adult study-group held each Wednesday morning, 10:30 in the Scout hut is for all mothers of children in Ocean Beach school.

Wallace Is For Keeping Interest Rates Down

Usury and interest rates are the subjects dealt with in a constitutional amendment appearing on the ballot Nov. 6, as proposition No. 12, according to Ralph W. Wallace, Progressive Republican nominee for state assemblyman for the 78th district. Wallace states that although the measure purports to lower interest rates it will in actual operation up interest rates and open the doors to uncontrolled, usurious practices.

"The present usury law fixes 12 per cent, a year as the maximum rate of interest, and the legislature cannot exempt any company or person from its provisions," Wallace said. "The proposed law, No. 12, fixes the maximum rate of interest at 10 per cent, a year, but expressly exempts from that restriction banks, building and loan companies, credit unions, industrial loan companies, agricultural co-operatives, pawnbroker and personal property brokers. It also grants to the legislature power and authority to prescribe the maximum rate of interest for those companies which are not restricted by the general provision of 10 per cent, a year. Unless the legislature exercises this power and prescribes the maximum rate the exempted companies will be unrestricted.

"I am unable to see why these companies, except possibly the ones which make small short time loans, should be given any special exemption from the general provision restricting interest to 10 per cent, a year. Borrowers should not be required to pay more to one lender than to another.

"While I am in favor of that portion of the proposed law lowering the maximum rate of interest from 12 per cent to 10 per cent a year, I do not believe this one good feature outweighs the vicious provisions of creating special lending classes. Laws guarding against unreasonable interest are laws against financial oppression, and should be favorably regarded, but No. 12 is a step backward from our present all inclusive usury law because it exempts from the general usury provisions the lenders who make 90 per cent of the loans in California. I shall vote 'no' on No. 12."

Wallace added that the present usury law would stop a great deal of the present financial oppression if it were enforced according to its provisions.

MARINE FOOTBALLERS PLAY POMONA SATURDAY NIGHT

Again the San Diego Marine Football team gives San Diego its best football of the year. Undefeated for the season and having run large scores against all opposition the Devil Dogs are now being rated equal to their great squad of last year which defeated Santa Clara, held U. C. L. A. to a 14-13 victory and swamped State College by an overwhelming score of 38-0.

Saturday night at Sports Field they will engage the strong Pomona College eleven in what should be one of the most interesting games of the season. Pomona has plenty of power, speed and reserve strength to combat the charges of Bauer, Neil, Reynolds, Poppleman, Kramer and other Marine ball packers. A large rooting party will accompany the Pomona team to San Diego.

The following week end the University of Southern California Spartan team will engage the Marines at Sports Field.

LIEUT. BERT A. ALLEN POST 2415 AUXILIARY

Election of officers of the Lieut. Bert A. Allen post 2415, for the ensuing year was held Oct. 11, 1934. Comrade Madigan was elected post commander; Comrade Batt, Sr. vice commander; Comrade Aubrey, Jr. vice commander; Comrade Ewing quartermaster; Commander Buckle, port advocate; Comrade Zumwalt, chaplain; Comrade Padgett, surgeon; Comrade Doran, officer-of-the-day; Comrades Fish and Johnson, trustees; Comrade Batt, delegate to county council. The best wishes of all members are with the new officers for a most successful year. And bearing in mind that no organization can survive on wishes alone it is imperative that all members put forth their best efforts to assist the post officers in the discharge of their obligations.

Are you a veteran? Do you belong to a veteran organization and work at it? Or are you one of those who shifts the burden of the fight and expense on to your former comrades in arms? Join your veteran organization NOW and do your part!

The post, assisted by the ladies of the auxiliary will give a card party at 8 o'clock Nov. 2, at the Ocean Beach Woman's club. Prizes for high scores and refreshments will be served. Come up and see us this time!

WHITHER ARE WE GOING?

One cannot be satisfied to live unthinkingly from day to day and year to year—seeing the same things, thinking the same thoughts, pursuing the same pleasures, too lazy to change our thoughts, our mode of living; living our lives with no thought of who we are, why we are here, whence we came or whither we are going. Theosophy opens up such an avenue of hope, of aspiration for each and everyone.

Thursday evening, November 1, at 7:30 p. m. in the civic center on Abbott street, Mrs. Mora Forbes will lead the discussion on the Whither. There will also be a short Sanskrit lesson. Questions are invited and all interested are welcome.

OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL

Due to the fact that the new school building is not yet completed, the Ocean Beach school will not hold a special observation of American Public Schools Week, November 6 to 12. A general display of school work, an open house, and an evening program will be held shortly after the new building is completed.

Protege pins were given to children in the 5th and 6th grades who made four 1's and two 2's or better in their citizenship grades, for the first 5 week period. Those earning the pins were: Carolyn Hollingshead, Phyllis Price, William Frazier, Raymond Malcolm, Gene Martin, Bobby Buchanan, Billie Craig, Robert Decker, Fred Grabau, Clark Huston, Max Miller, Tommy Padgett, Eugene Settle, Eddie Thomas, Edgar Wood, Tommy McManus, Walter Delamer, Betty Banfill, Luella Brown, Florence Decker, Marjorie Fitzgerald, Mercedes Forsberg, Betty Ruth Gates Ethel Haynes, Ruth Hertz, Betty Lou Jones, Mary Kieber, Maxine Kvach, Mildred Lee, Joanne Martin, Charlotte Oberholser, Mary Parker, Carmen Price, Marie Quist, Gordene Rowe, Kathleen Settle, Beulah Whorrall, Dona Clark, Jane Craig, Betty Gerrish, Dorothy Herz, Frances Littlefield, Willise McCarty, Sally Medlar, Leona Padgett, Mary Shadbolt, Mary Shields, Ann Lymons, Teresa McConnell, Darrell Bailey, Fred DeBlanc. Donald Deger, Kenneth Harvey, John McCullough, Jack Noorda, Edward Plant, Clayton Peterson, Carl Yoshimine, Edward Mercer, Clifford Kerr, Shelby Boles, Dolores Carl, Elaine Carl, Margaret Goeb, Eileen Killebrew, Elizabeth Long, Margaret Mathis, Barbara Mehling, Marie McCormick, Joan Soper, Alice Utiger, Betty Wisdom, Edwin Bennett, Donald Davis, Jack Maddox, Walter Marshall, John Masters, Billy Nelson, Charles Peterson, Warren Stone.

On Tuesday after school, 36 good citizens in Mrs. Moon's H5-L6 room went on a picnic. They held their picnic in the pepper grove of Balboa park and mothers and fathers helped to take the children. Once every 5 weeks the good citizens of that room go on a picnic. The affair was a most enjoyable one.

The kindergarten of Ocean Beach made two trips this week to the Santa Fe Station to view an engine at first hand. They wished to check up closely as they are building an engine and hope to have it completed in the near future.

Miss Lotta Perry, supervisor of art, was the speaker at the teachers' meeting on Monday afternoon. She displayed many interesting samples of children's art work.

The reading group which meets in Miss Shea's room enjoyed trips to two libraries on Thursday. The Children's Library and the Roosevelt Junior High Library were visited. The group wishes to thank all friends who furnished cars.

Bruce Schramm from the Emerson school enrolled in the L6 grade last week.

Irene, Jack and Richard, Kgn., H1 and L1 respectively, enrolled in Ocean Beach school last week from Fremont school.

Ann Gilmore, kindergarten, and Mary Gilmore, L2, came to Ocean Beach school this week from the Washington school.

Mrs. Karl's H1 is having a grocery store and the children are busy making many things for it. They were very glad to receive the fish bowl this month for having more parents at the PTA meeting than any other room had. They also have a canary, and are learning songs and poems about them.

POINT LOMA ASSEMBLY

The women's division of the Point Loma assembly enjoyed a fine program at the regular afternoon meeting on October 18.

Miss Jennie Ladd, a well known local attorney, spoke on "Portective Laws for Women." She explained the laws regarding community property, joint tenantry, wills and the statutory homestead and gave much helpful information.

Mrs. Chas. J. Leopold spoke on the "Passion Play" of Oberammergau. She presented a most vivid picture of the play and players, and described her visit to Oberammergau as the most wonderful experience of her lifetime. This year, she said, they are celebrating the 300th anniversary of the starting of the play which has been given regularly since the year 1680.

Miss Rosemarie Wynn gave several piano numbers.

Miss Byrd Taft and Mrs. E. K. Morton were hostesses for the day.

The Loman Reporter

The next time you enter the front doors of Point Loma High school keep right on until you find yourself inside another pair of doors and within the library. Mrs. Neill will welcome your browsing around among the shelves that are at last filling with a fine assortment of books, classic and modern, fact and fiction. In science you may review accomplishment with Paul de Kruif in "Microbe Hunters" or "Hunger Fighters", you may let Weed introduce you to "Butterflies Worth Knowing" or Kallett and Schliuk show you what "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs" showed them. In the arts Spaeth can interpret "The Art of Enjoying Music" or Blumer analyze "Movies and Conduct", while Curtis will personally conduct you from London Bridge to Stoke Poges in "England in Song and Story". Benet awaits your advent with "Fifty Poets", Hobart with "Oil for the Lamps of China", O'Connor with "Mellon's Millions", and Nathan with "One More Spring". At will you can find "Who's Who for 1934" or "Living Authors" or "Authors Today and Yesterday". With Monkhouse you may go to "Moscow 1911-13" or with Chase to "Mexico". Anonymously you may get an estimate of "New Dealers", autobiographically learn about Lincoln Steffens, or zestfully with Adamic enjoy "The Native's Return". Considering its age you will find the library at Point Loma High a lusty and vigorous stripling that shows unusual promise.

——PLHS——

Point Loma High has now reached a total enrollment of 1069, which is sixty above the peak enrollment of last year. The peak is usually reached in February at the first of the second semester.

——PLHS——

94% of the employees of Point Loma High have already subscribed to the Community Chest according to the record of A. B. Crawford who is in charge of subscriptions.

Repainting of tennis court lines, repair of tennis nets and the construction of a three hundred foot section of bleachers eighteen feet deep are all in prospect to insure that young Lomans enjoy sports to the utmost.

On Thursday and Friday, October 18 and 19, thirty-five boys of the Senior glee club under the direction of Myron B. Green led the junior and senior high schools in a merry song fest. The favorites of the occasion were "The Man on the Flying Trapeze", "Smiles", "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum," and "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain". The glee club boys gave an interesting Eighteenth century folk round, handed down composerless to our day, called "Hold Thy Peace". Lomans can sing when in a merry mood!

What with Harriet Werre and Florence Chadwick and Georgia Smiley occupying the daily press and the Agua Caliente pool with their swimming feats and the young twins, Martha and Marjorie Rundahl, being awarded a national red cross junior life saving certificates recently, Point Loma Senior and Junior High seems to be coming along swimmingly. Look to your laurels, boys. The mermaids prevail.

The classes in 510 U. S. History under Mrs. Giles have recently worked out individual projects with a nice diffeentiation: Illustrated ink sketches in manuscript folder detailing Massachusetts' early history, by Betty Ballinger; notes on Plymouth in imitation of an illuminated manuscript, by Gaylord Parkinson; an original illustrated poem of Plymouth, by Janice Thuli; an original illustrated diary of a Plymouth maid, by Betty Boone, are creditable pieces of work. Special mention may well be made of the work of Marjorie Cooper, Eileen Shields, Robert Ziegler, Bernice Dodge, Pat Buckley, David Sterne, Trevor Woodward, Katherine Wilson, Lily Bell Couts and Elinor Rohde.

The proposed election assembly, sponsored by Mrs. Giles and Miss Henderson, which will occur shortly, promises to be out of the ordinary. Student speakers will support the candidacy of Merriam, Haight, and Sinclair for Governor, soliciting the support of voters by the soundest arguments the student campaigners can devise. At the conclusion of these speeches, the student body will cast a straw vote; and the election returns will be duly calculated and later made public.

Monday, October 22, a special bus began to operate from Five Points and from Ocean Beach junction to Point Loma High as a result of a new financial arrangement made with the San Diego Street Railway Company by the Board of Education. This will greatly convenience Loman and facillitate their prompt arrival at school. The schedule is as follows:

Bus leaves Five Points at 7:35 a. m. (after connecting with the inbound route A bus from La Jolla).

Bus arrives at Point Loma high.

Bus leaves Point Loma high for Ocean Beach junction.

Bus leaves Ocean Beach junction at 7:51 a. m. for Point Loma high. Two additional features may be noted:

The inbound La Jolla bus leaves Old Town at 7:26 a. m. The bus that has maintained a regular schedule from Ocean Beach junction continues to function.

Stream For Assembly Reported Capable

Better fitted by experience and the establishment of valuable contacts and friendships during his first term, Charles W. Stream, candidate for re-election to the assembly from the 80th district, will accomplish much for his constituents if he is returned to office Nov. 6, his friends declare.

In the past few months, Stream has covered the wide territory he represents, seeking to learn from the people their legislative needs that he may be ready to present them at the 1935 session of the legislature. In this way, he acquired a thoro knowledge of the district's problems, and he is determined to represent and protect its taxpayers and not any special interest, clicque or organization.

"My trips thru the district have convinced me taxpayers must get relief if they are to survive," said Stream. "and I propose to exert every effort, if re-elected, to protect the interests of the farmers, orchardists and working men of San Diego county.

"In regard to my stand on important present-day problems, I pledge myself to support any legislation pertaining to the relief of people whose property is subject to improvement bonds; to work for any legislation to protect the small farm and home owner; to labor for any work programs to supplant the present system of relief as the unemployed must have work at a living wage; to further support as I have always supported any legislation to relieve the unemployment situation; to vote for any measure to obtain state or federal funds to refinance Mattoon and other ad valorem districts so the sufferers therein may have relief and save their property, and to vote without hesitation to take the Townsend Old Age Pension Plan to the highest authorities for adoption. Furthermore, I will fight with all my power any effort to cripple our educational system."

Whelan's Record Shows Economy

CUTS BUDGET EACH YEAR

1931	$86,133.29
1932	76,862.98
1933	72,215.76
1934	69,539.00

WORK INCREASES

In 1931, Whelan's first year, work in the office increased 70% over 1930. 1932 work increased 56% over 1930. 1933 work increased 38% over 1930.

Increased work called for more employees—yet, Whelan's budget decreased year by year. Why?

Because:

HE CUT COST OF MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION YEARLY

1931	$17,050
1932	12,151
1933	10,450
1934	7,350

OTHER SAVINGS

$62,000, Whelan collected on bonds of delinquent former officers who were short—former administration allowed this to go uncollected.

Official Record Shows

Net cost per case under Whelan is less than during any administration for 12 years.

Forty Students Battle Death

IN GAS-SWEPT SAN DIEGO SCHOOL ROOM

ONE VICTIM MAY EXPIRE

FIVE OTHERS GO TO HOSPITAL

Panic Hits Chemistry Class as Wave of Chlorine Topples Members

SAN DIEGO, October 22—Forty pupils battled death here late today in a school room filled with noxious chlorine gas.

When frantic hands finally had broken open the windows, one girl lay apparently dying, five other students were overcome and thirty-four were gasping in near collapse.

GIRL SERIOUSLY STRICKEN

Miss Merle Burke, 17 years of age, is the victim most seriously affected.

The five less serious affected were Lucille Levin, Fay Pielop, Arelene Palmer, Marion Secrist and Lena Kline.

The chemistry class room of the Point Loma High school was the scene of the gas escape.

An extra curricular class was being held late in the afternoon. A panic developed as the gas began leaking and the students felt its deadly effects.

Finally, as a number of the group began toppling over, one of the students broke out the windows of the room and help arrived from outside.

NURSES GIVE AID

First aid was administered by two school nurses, Ruth Hall and Clarice Swenson, both of whom had been detained by the monthly health examination report, and several teachers while doctors were en route to the school.

Dr. Paul Burst with police emergency apparatus and ambulance, was the first to arrive and took charge, ordering the six to a hospital at once when they showed hesitancy in responding to treatment.

Investigation revealed someone had left open the valve to the generator in which the gas was being produced for experimentation.

GAS SPREADS RAPIDLY

The gas rolled through the large room rapidly and spread to the halls which were virtually inclosed as outside doors had been closed.

It was reported at the County hospital tonight that Miss Burke has little chance for recovery. The other five treated there are expected to show little effect from the gas poisoning.

Chlorine gas was the first gas used by Germans against the Allies during the World war and is termed one of the most deadly gases.

(End of article.)

An example of how noxious chlorine gas is we see in the fact that it is used to disinfect the water supply of the city of San Diego, also that it is used as a medicine to cure colds and disinfect further the water in our swimming pools.

Only four girls out of the twenty-five students in the class were coughing badly—no one "toppled over". None of the students were taken to the hospital, nor did the police surgeon administer first aid; he was called about it, but did not come to the school, as it was not serious enough. Merle Burke, who in the Los Angeles Times had "little chance for recovery", was at school the following day, as were the three other students who had throat irritation during the "panic". The valve on the generator was not left open, as there is no generator.

The Times was right in one respect, chlorine gas was used by the Germans, but they found it ineffective.

By Clarice Swenson the Times meant our very efficient principal, Clarence R. Swenson, who will have it known he does not spend his spare(?) time caring for "gassed" students.

The windows and transoms are always kept open during laboratory experiments, furthermore two motor driven ventilators were running at the time, so it would hardly be necessary to break any windows. The sixth period class held session in the same room where the students had "battled death", less than an hour before, without having prostration.

This deceiving article might be overlooked, but, on the following day an article equally as devious was published. The latter article is just as lengthy as the preceding one, but more erratic. The Los Angeles Times says that David B. Austin, the instructor, was out of the room at the time; this is atrocious. Mr. Austin was in the room the whole period and was trying to subdue the chlorine gas.

If the Times has a habit of making such flagrant errors, they certainly will not be relied upon by the people.

OCEAN BEACH POST NO. 433 and AUXILIARY

The voters are again reminded, lest they forget, to go to the polls and vote; those who are in need of a ride remember the 'phone number is BV-0166 for transportation for those disabled.

This is to remind all members that the next regular business meeting of this post will be held Thursday Nov. 1, at the Legion hall, 1957 Abbott street, at which time many important matters will be discussed. The post has secured their membership quota for this month and it is the desire of the officers that we obtain our full year's quota and more in the very near future; so come out an bring a comrade with you.

OCCIDENTAL LIFE ACQUIRES AMERICAN MEDICAL LIFE

Consolidation of American Medical Life Company, of Spokane, Washington, with Occidental Life Insurance Company of California, wholly owned by Transamerica Corporation, was announced today by L. M. Giannini.

In making the announcement, Giannini, who is president of Occidental and Chairman of the executive committee of Transamerica, stated that the American Medical office will remain in Spokane as a branch of Occidental.

At the time of its acquisition by Transamerica Corporation, American Medical Life had $9,431,000 insurance in force, admitted assets of $757,000, surplus for policy holders of $265,000 and reserves of $444,000. The acquisition was made thru the purchase of all common stock.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

A capacity house greeted Gottfried de Purucker last Sunday afternoon when he lectured on "Retribution" at Theosophical headquarters. "The Great War would never have taken place if men of the West had been governed by the moral feeling that what they do they are held to account for, that what they think they must answer unto, that what they feel are responsible for," said Dr. de Purucker, leader of the Point Loma Theosophists.

On Sunday, October 28th, Mrs. Grace Knoche will lecture on "Man is not One, but Two", at 3 o'clock at Theosophical headquarters.

BANK OF AMERICA RESOURCES FAR AHEAD OF 1 9 3 2

Deposits in Bank of America have steadily increased and are now almost three hundred million dollars above the low point of March 1932. Total resources again exceed one billion dollars, and, notwithstanding the inevitable depression-time write-offs, capital structure stands at more than one hundred million dollars.

"I can't wait to see you on the storeroom shelf," she said aloud. "Come on, I'll put you there." She lifted the tray. "Ooch, but you weigh a ton! Am I one good little back-to-the-lander?" as she started toward the cellar door. "A squirrel storing nuts for the winter has nothing on—"

A thunderous knock resounded through the house. Prudence took a quick step forward. A frightened cat reached the same spot in one leap. The girl tripped, the tray tipped, the jars of beets struck the floor with a crash calculated to make the pilot of the last word in bombing planes pale with envy.

Ruby liquid flew in all directions. It dripped from walls and ceiling; it splashed the white frock; it trickled in crimson rivulets down Prue's cheeks; it did a modernistic design on her shoes and lavishly polka-dotted her bare arms. For an instant she stood in dazed consternation, then as she saw her face reflected in a small mirror, she laughed.

"Oh, you demon can—can" The words choked into a spasm of mirth. She sank to a chair, dropped her head to her arms flung out on the table, and tried to control the peals of laughter which shook her. A hand caught her shoulder.

"Hey! What's happened? Quit laughing like that! You'll go goofy in a minute."

Lips twitching, nostrils quivering, eyes gleaming through tears, Prudence looked up at Rodney Gerard.

"C-canning trouble!" She choked on the words.

Gerard administered an authoritative shake.

"Stop laughing. It's painfully evident that you are toppling on the brink of hysterics. I know of only one sure remedy for that. I should hate to do it—but I may feel obliged to kiss you."

Prudence was on her feet. "Just naturally helpful, aren't you? You wouldn't dare—" She met his eyes and changed her tone. "I'll stop, Signor Mussolini. Only you could stand there like a graven image in the midst of this—this slaughter. You see, I've gone thrifty. I've been preparing for the l-long hard winter by canning young, tender beets—no t-taste to them when they g-grow up. I was carrying the jars on a tray when a thun-thunderous knock sent Cleopatra scurrying to cover—Cleopatra's the cat, in case you don't know—with the result of a f-foot-on collision. I—"

"Stop and get your breath. Hysterics will get you if you don't watch out." The hint of amused warning in Gerard's voice set Prue's pulses throbbing.

"They won't. I shan't need your prescription, thank you. Why are you here? It would be you, wouldn't it? What did you come for? My word! I believe it was your knock that brought on the catastrophe. Are you responsible for this mess?" She indicated the smeared room with an accusing wave of her hand.

"I'm sorry. Can't I help clean up?"

"You can not. Macky will be down in a few minutes, then we'll do it together. You'd better go while the going is good. Why did you come? I haven't time to talk even lumber business in the morning. I'm a working girl. I wish you'd go."

Even as Prudence frowned at him, she was thinking how Fate conspired to block her. After Jean's intimation that she was setting her cap for him, she had sworn to herself that she would chill Rodney Gerard to the bone the next time he spoke to her; instead, here she was hysterical with laughter, friendly laughter. One couldn't be impressively dignified when one resembled nothing so much as an example of spatter-work done in beet juice.

Hands in his coat pockets, Gerard strode to the door, turned at the threshold.

"Stop scowling. I'm going. Hospitable, aren't you? I came to ask if you would have time to make a silver collar for that kitten of Jean's she's so crazy about."

"A silver collar! I'd love it! I've had an idea for one in my mind for months! I'll make time! Come on to the shop—I've turned Uncle Austin's office into a workroom—and I'll show you a sketch I made before I became a farmer."

She had not realized how she loved and had missed her craft, Prudence told herself, as she led the way to a room which opened from the front hall.

"It won't take me a jiffy to find that sketch." She flung the assurance over her shoulder at Gerard. She pulled open one of the doors of the bookcase. A pile of papers showered to the floor

"Darn! Wouldn't you know it when I'm in a hurry!"

"Hold on! I'll get them!" Gerard dropped to one knee beside her. "I don't wonder you can't find anything in that mess."

"It is a sight. I tuck everything I don't know what to do with in there. Here's the sketch! Now I'll find the stones."

Gerard laid the papers he had collected on top of a pile while Prudence manipulated the knob of a small safe. He stood beside her as the heavy door swung open.

"What are those white things?" He indicated the row of packets in one of the compartments.

"Stones. Some precious, some semi-precious."

"You must have a fortune there."

"Not a fortune, but more money than I can afford to have tied up in them. I'm a jelly-fish, I have no sales resistance. When I see a lovely gem, I have an attack of what the economists call 'Buyer's delirium.' These are the most valuable, though I have a pigeon-blood ruby and a cabochon sapphire which couldn't be called grubby."

"That's a corking emerald."

"It is choice, it's flawless. It was my grandmother's."

"What's that stuff in the bottles which looks like hunks of colored glass?"

"Enamels. Transparent and opaque. They are ground in a little water to salt-like consistency in that mortar, washed thoroughly before they are applied to metal, and heated until they melt. When I want them especially jewel-like I use them over gold leaf. I can't enamel here, worse luck. Can't get enough heat. Have to use a bellows and a big blow pipe."

"You sure know this job, don't you? What are you looking for in those papers?"

"Here they are! Here's the design for the collar. See those medallions between the links?" She looked up. "You're not listening! You're not looking!"

"I'm looking all right. Never realized before how much red there is in your hair. The sunlight brings it out. It's gorgeous, girl."

"My hair! I thought you came here for a silver collar."

"I did. Cross-my-throat-an'-hope-to-die, I did. You love this work, don't you? Your eyes are like stars."

"Of course I love it, but I get tremendously thrilled over whatever interests me."

"You'll wear yourself out."

"Better to wear out than rust out."

"Meaning me, I suppose?"

"If the shoe fits, put it on. Do you realize that you are wasting my precious time? I thought you were about to give me an honest-to-goodness order."

Gerard laid his hand on the sketch. "Don't put it away. I do want the collar. You were explaining about the medallions between the links. Will they be silver?"

"Yes. They are to be carved and tooled with Micky Mouse episodes. See these cat's-eyes glow and smolder? I'll set them in silver to alternate with the medallions. This pear-shaped piece of Korean amber—which is supposed to contain magic—will hang from the buckle in front. Like the idea?"

"You're a fraud. You ask that as anxiously as if you didn't know it was a knock-out. Of course I like it." He carefully lifted the paper on which lay the emerald and some diamonds. "I like these, too. Any chance of your making this ring up to order?"

Did he want it to give to a girl? The thought flashed through Prue's mind even as she shook her head.

"Not a chance, even if I had money to invest in baguette diamonds, which I haven't. It has been one of the dreams of my life to wear that ring. Unless Prosperity farm plunges so deep into the red that we can't pull it out, I'll hold on to the emerald."

She thoughtfully nibbled the point of the engraving tool.

"The silver collar for the kitten is likely to be rather expensive. I can't set a price because I have no idea how much time it will take."

"That's all right. I'll give it to Jean for Christmas. Think you'll have it done by then?"

"Christmas! I hope so, but, of course, if I have many morning interruptions—"

"I accept your delicate hint. I'm off. It won't interrupt your work, I hope, if I stop to collect Jean and the kitten and speak to your brother, who is lying on the grass patch in the middle of the garden?"

"David on the ground! I left him—"

Prudence fairly flew through the house. She heard Gerard behind her as she raced into the garden. Dave on the ground!

She dropped to her knees beside him.

"Dave! Dave! Did you fall?"

With a murmur of concern, he sat up and put his arm about her.

"Prue! Prue. Of course I didn't fall, dear. After a while the chair seemed hard and the grass inviting, so I flung the rug on the ground and stretched out on it. I've been asleep." He tightened his hold. "Look here, my dear, if you have me on your mind every minute, I'll go off by myself somewhere. Give me a hand up, Gerard. I've been lying here so long that I'm stiff."

Rodney Gerard linked an arm in his as he stood up. Prudence was conscious of the tension about her mouth as she looked at them. David's face was so pale in comparison to that of the man beside him. She achieved a fair imitation of a laugh.

"Have you on mind every minute, Dave! You'd be surprised if you knew that I haven't thought of you once since I tucked you into that steamer chair. Now who's coming?"

The gate in the white picket fence which enclosed the garden creaked on its hinges. A grotesque figure turning cartwheels with incredible rapidity hurtled through the opening, came right-side up, scratched a chalky ear which protruded through his white skull cap, and made a sweeping bow.

Jean raced to her uncle.

"A clown! Uncle Rod, a clown! Where's the circus?"

Had Rodney Gerard gritted an exclamation between his teeth, or had she imagined it? Prudence looked from his narrowed eyes to the smeared blue eyebrows, the lips like a bloody gash in the whiteness of the chalk-face of the man who was looking back at him. The regulation white suit of the sawdust ring, polka-dotted with black, showed traces of travel.

Jean's eyes were like stars. "Oh, Uncle Rod! Isn't he a peach! You will take me to the circus, won't you?"

David Schuyler held out his hand and smiled.

"How are you, Chicot? Must be two years since I've seen you. Where did you drop from?"

The clown shook Schuyler's hand. He blinked and swallowed, turning his cone-shaped cap in chalky hands.

"Never expected to see you here sir. They told me at the Rescue mission that you was sick somewhere. I'm with Sassoon's Smashing show. It's stuck in a nearby town, and when the boss found I—I'd once lived in this region, he thought I might have a drag with folks and sent me on a motorcycle to drum up trade."

His eyes shifted to Rodney Gerard. "The little girl would like the show, Mister. It's a swell show."

"Uncle Rod, you will take me, won't you?" Jean's lips quivered with eagerness. "I've never seen many horses! I've never been to a circus! Mother thinks they're cheap. Oh, Miss Prue, ask him to take me, please—he'll do it if you ask him."

Significance shone through the amusement in Rodney Gerard's eyes as they met Prue's. Only an instant their glances met, before he parleyed indulgently:

"Take it easy, Jean. You've got me all excited. You've started something, Chicot. You said the show was stuck in the next town. What's the trouble?"

Again Prudence had the sense of an undercurrent, a dramatic undercurrent at that. Gerard's curt question seemed to set atmospheric high-potency waves in motion. Was he angry? Annoyed was a better word. Whatever his mood, it tightened her nerves. The clown crushed his cap in one vein-knotted hand.

"It's this way, Mister. The next town we were billed in was cleaned out by fire. Our show keeps up with our paper, rain or shine, floods or knee-deep mud, but when the town itself goes blooey, what have you? That throws us out. So the boss says we'd lay out the show in the burg I've come from. It's a good honest show for the little girl to see, Mister."

He pulled at a painted forelock, looked at Prudence with haggard eyes, stretched the red gash in a grin.

"An' for big girls, too. We've had to turn away crowds all season, and the parade—whoops, you should see the parade! All the headliners out—and the calliope. Sounds this-a-way—"

Chicot gave an imitation which set the echoes jangling. It brought Si Puffer from the barn on a run. His wife and Miss Mack soilled from the kitchen door.

"You said the show was in a near-by town, Chicot. How near?"

Prudence caught the swift glance between Rodney Gerard and Mrs. Puffer as he asked the question, was aware of the sound as of gas escaping from a punctured balloon, before she closed her lips and retreated, pulling Jane Mack with her into the house. Did the clown's presence mean something to her, too?

"Sure it's nearby. Only fifty miles, Mister. I wish all you folks would come. The little girl would get a great kick from it."

"Oh, Uncle Rod—" Jean's voice broke from excitement.

"Take it easy, Jean, we'll go. What time does the parade start, Chicot?"

"Nine."

"We'll be there. Prue, Jean and I are counting on you to keep us company."

"I'd love it—if—" Prue's eyes flashed to her brother.

"Of course you'll go, Prue. You haven't been away from this town since you came, have you? Jane Mack will look after me." David Schuyler answered her unspoken question.

The clown twisted his cap. "I wish you'd come, sir. It's a good show."

"Can't make it, Chicot. Glad you have your job again. Watch your step—this time."

"Thank you, sir. I will, sir. There ain't no occasion for me not to, sir. Well, folks, I'll be seeing you."

He pulled his cap hard over his ears, and departed on his hands, his legs in the air. Jean ran beside him, pelting him with questions, going into girlish giggles of laughter. As the clown disappeared through the gateway, Rodney Gerard and Si Puffer followed without one backward glance.

Prudence dropped to the grass beside her brother.

"Strange that you should have known that clown, Dave."

"All sorts of men came to the Rescue mission, Prue. Chicot was in great trouble about a granddaughter who had been running wild. He beat up one of her followers—to hear him tell it, she had a lot of them—and lost his job for a while."

"Hey! What's Happened?"

Prudence appeared absorbed in her search for a four-leaf clover.

"Dave, did it occur to you that Mrs. Si knew that clown, that Rodney Gerard knew him?"

Schuyler swung his feet from the chair and rose. The lines between his eyes deepened as he answered gravely:

"I'm sorry to say it did, Prue. Confoundedly sorry."

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNIING

Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, who lives at High Ledges on the neighboring farm. There is at once a mutual attraction between the two, but Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway, a rival of Gerard, tries to buy the timber off Prue's land, but she dislikes his conceited attitude and contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. On the evening Prue is expecting David from New York she is visited by Mrs. Walter Gerard and her thirteen-year-old daughter, Jean. They are hateful, curious persons and leave Prue rankled. A few days later Prudence comes in contact with them again when she accompanies Rod to his place.

Continent of Atlantis Was Surrounded by Sea

The lost continent of Atlantis was entirely surrounded by sea. It existed, supposedly, between the Straits of Gibraltar and the Mexican Gulf. It had been a great empire of tall, fair-haired, blue-eyed men and women. Alleged historical accounts agree that it was inhabited by supermen who lived peacefully and happily over a long period of years. The arts of civilization of the present race were acquired, according to historians, from this lost race before it vanished beneath the sea. A description of the lost continent has been furnished by Plato.

"The whole country," he relates, "was very lofty and precipitous on the side of the sea, but the country immediately about and surrounding the city was a level plain, itself surrounded by mountains; it was smooth and even, but of an oblong shape, extending in one direction 3,000 stadia, and going up the country from the sea through the center of the island 2,000 stadia; the whole region of the island lies toward the south and is sheltered from the north. The surrounding mountains were celebrated for their number and size and beauty, in which they exceeded all that are to be seen anywhere."

Wooden Plows

Wooden plows are not only still common, but efficient for their task. On some clay lands they are preferred to iron because the clay does not stick to them so much, says Tit-Bits Magazine. They are most common in East Anglia, and at Maldon, Essex, there is a firm that has been making them for 120 years. To this day they exhibit and sell them at shows such as the "Royal," where they take their place among the most up-to-date electrical and petrol appliances.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Little Wooden Cube

THE prefect of Prague was taking a stroll one day when he was set upon by three men and badly beaten.

There is no doubt that the men intended to murder him, but he was a strong and courageous person and he gave them such a battle that they finally took to their heels and ran away.

The prefect not only lived, but he determined to find his assailants and see that they were punished, if it required the remainder of his natural life.

The men had come at him so suddenly and he was forced to fight so hard that he did not get a good look at any one of the trio.

But there were two little clews that gave the detectives something to work upon.

One was the odor of musk.

The other was a gray glove that lay on the sidewalk.

The prefect of police called all of his men together and showed them the glove.

He directed them to visit every glove factory in the country and also every establishment where gloves were likely to be sold, in the hope of finding the mate to that gray glove.

It seemed like a hopeless quest, but eventually they found the factory where that kind of glove was manufactured.

There they secured a list of the shopkeepers who sold such gloves at retail, and finally as the result of almost superhuman patience they located a man named Emil Dressler who owned the glove.

He was shadowed for some days because the police wanted to be sure of their man before they placed him under arrest.

While this was going on he discovered that he was being trailed and took alarm.

For five days he remained away from his lodgings.

At the end of the five days, thinking that the coast was clear, he returned.

But the minute he went into his room an officer was at the door demanding admittance.

"It's all up, Dressler," said the policeman.

"Your place is completely surrounded and I call on you to surrender."

"All right," he replied, in a pleasant voice; "if you will give me a minute I'll do as you wish."

The officer waited with all-concealed impatience, and just when he was about to pound on the door again he was startled by the loud report of a pistol.

He burst in the door.

On the floor lay the dead body of Emil Dressler, holding a smoking pistol in his right hand.

The prefect of police was summoned and he made a careful search of the premises.

In a bureau drawer he located the missing glove—the mate to the one that had been found on the sidewalk on the day he was assaulted.

On a table was a partly finished letter which the suicide had been writing to his mother.

In it he confessed that he belonged to a secret society which was pledged to wipe out the heads of the government.

They had begun, he said, by trying to kill the prefect of police.

But he was at bay now and would be compelled to quit with his work unfinished.

This was not all, for in a hiding place was discovered a little wooden cube, with the letter "A" inscribed on its side.

It was evident that the members of the organization drew lots when it came time to assassinate a ruler, and that the little cube was the notification that had been sent to Dressler.

That same day a man was arrested while in the act of assaulting a manufacturer of Prague.

He had about him the odor of musk, and in his pocket was found one of the little wooden cubes with the letter "A" upon it.

He was given the third degree and made a confession implicating a number of other men in the city.

They were vowed to overthrow the government and to set up a Red republic.

All of the papers and paraphernalia were found and a trap set for the ringleaders.

That night nineteen of them were arrested.

Some were executed and others imprisoned for life, but the net result was to nip in the bud the movement for the Red republic.

Shared Napoleon's Exile

Four important personages shared Napoleon's exile—Bertrand, Montholon, Las Cases, and Gourgaud. In lesser capacities, Marchand, Capriana, and Santini were also with Napoleon. The household of Bonaparte consisted of 51 persons, of whom nine, including four children, formed the suite of the emperor, the others being servants. Sir Hudson Lowe was the emperor's guardian on the island.

The "Bouquet" on a Building

"Putting the bouquet" on a building is a phrase that translates the name for a European festival in which the architects, contractors and workmen celebrate the laying of the final stone—symbolic of the completion of all the rough work—by putting above the finished roof a whole fir tree.

United States in Lead in Soap Consumption

Figures just published show that the world production of soap is on the increase. Of the 4,700,000 tons produced in 1932, Europe manufactured 2,500,000 tons, the United States 1,800,000 tons, Africa and Asia 300,000 tons conjointly, and Australia and New Zealand 70,000 tons.

The cleanest nation, statistically, is America, which leads the world with a consumption of 11.5 kilos of soap per head a year. Then follow the Netherlands, 11.1; Denmark, 10; Great Britain, 9; Australia, 8.7; France, 8; and at the other end of the scale Poland, Jugoslavia, Rumania, and Bulgaria with an average of only 2 kilos or less. A kilo is approximately two pounds three and a quarter ounces. China, which hardly washes at all, cannot be taken into consideration, but some of the smaller soap-using nations use efficient substitutes, and in Germany soap making is still largely a domestic occupation, one-man factories being widespread, thus making it difficult to obtain an exact estimate of the national output.

Royal Relations

King Edward VII of England was married to Alexandra, daughter of King Christian IX of Denmark. Her sister Dagmar was the wife of Alexander III of Russia. Their son, the murdered Czar Nicholas II, was a second cousin to the present English King George V. The resemblance between the two cousins was remarkable.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a more natural movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels until nature restores them to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child.

Makes Powerful Light

Adding a minute part of a rare metal, rubidium, to mercury usually used in mercury lamps has resulted in the development of a lamp whose light approximates sunlight. The metal causes the lamp to give red rays, in addition to the mercury spectrum. The lamp is said to have a life ten times as long as an ordinary incandescent lamp. Rubidium costs $7 a dram, but only one five-hundredths part of the metal is used in each lamp to change the light hue from green to light red. Previously physicists had improved the mercury lamp by adding potassium to the mercury, but the potassium is said to disintegrate the glass bulb or tube of the lamp.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Skin is then beautifully clear, velvety and so soft—face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. At all leading druggists.

Powdered Saxolite

Reduces wrinkles and other age-signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in half-pint witch hazel and use daily as face lotion.

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength, S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect...it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions...and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-glo-bin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.

By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion... sound sleep...and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

WHERE TECHNOCRACY QUITS

"What do you regard as the hope of the human race?" asked the gentleman professor.

"Human vanity," answered the lady professor. "So long as men desire the acclaim of the crowd there must be people to provide it. Applause by machinery wouldn't mean a thing."

English Misspoken

"There is a growing indifference to the dignity of language."

"I resent it deeply," said Senator Sorghum. "I do my best to oppose it."

"In what way?"

"I leave positive instructions not to answer letters referring to any branch of the aviation business as 'aeronerties.'"

Suitable Sidelight

"I want my photograph taken, please," said the man.

"Certainly, sir," said the photographer. "Would you, like a carte or a cabinet?"

The man thought hard.

"It doesn't matter whether there's a cart or a cab in it," he answered. "But if you could manage to put in a railway truck, I should like it, because I'm a porter."—London Answers.

This Marriage Business

To the consternation of the guests the vicar was very late for the ceremony.

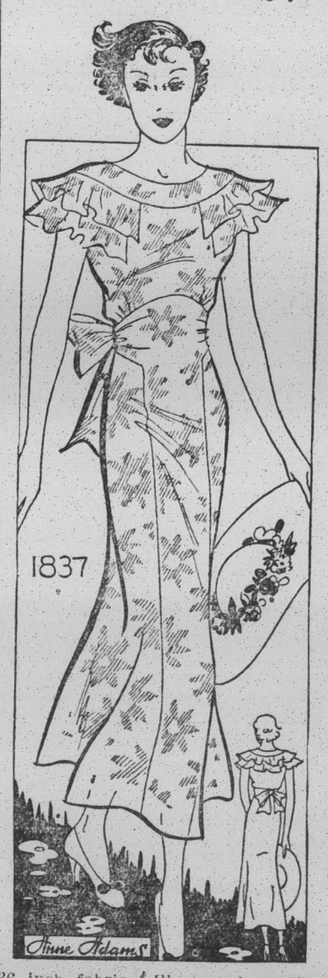
Gives Emphasis to Pretty Lines

PATTERN 1837

This frock has two ruffles over the shoulders which ripple refreshingly and a sash that ties its demure ends discreetly. It emphasizes the pretty lines of a young waist and the slimness of a young figure, and is a thoroughly delightful thing in either a print or a plain fabric. Think of it, for instance, in peach-colored organdie—wouldn't it be charming? or in voile or dotted swiss—or fashion the yoke and ruffles of contrast.

Pattern 1837 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3⅞ yards



36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

ROYAL REPOSE

"I'm sorry to keep grumbling, Mrs. Higgin," said the boarder, "but really I cannot sleep in that bed another night."

"I'd have you know," was the landlady's haughty rejoinder, "that that bed is fit for the prince of Wales."

"Ah," replied the other, "that explains why it has only three feathers."—London Humorist.

GOOD TRAINING

"But, my dear, why are you so enthusiastic about attending all the ball games?"

"Oh, the rush at the gate will keep me in practice for the bargain sales in the fall."

Those Dear Girls

The chorus girl came into the dressing room to announce joyfully that she was leaving at the end of the week to be married.

After a jealous silence, the cat of the company remarked, sweetly, "Speaking part at last, dearie."

Girl Friends

"This necklace is supposed to be unlucky. The last three women who owned it committed suicide."

"How interesting. Your husband bought it for you, I suppose?"

AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK NOVEMBER 5 TO 12

Teachers and pupils, members of the American Legion, the chamber of commerce, the Ministerial association, Parent-Teacher organizations and the Board of Education of city and county, as well as several of the more prominent private schools of the city, are preparing for the 14th celebration of American Education Week, November 5 to 12.

Education Week is an opportunity afforded each year through the sponsoring of the American Legion and the National Education Association, to make a study of the school work of today, to check up on it, so to speak, as to whether the schools are keeping up with the needs of the day and the probable needs of the future. A city and county wide observance of the week is to be held, and all citizens, whether parents or not, are urged to take an interest in the educational facilities offered to children and adults. If every citizen visits a school during this week, he or she will gain a better understanding of where goes the penny tax which is now being paid by all of us for goods and materials purchased will be gained.

STRAW VOTES FAVORABLE TO JUDGE CURTIS

Two straw votes conducted recently in San Diego, gave Judge Everett N. Curtis an easy lead in the race for Justice Court one.

Results of the straw votes revealed that a test vote in Logan Heights gave Judge Curtis a three to two majority, while the second, conducted in the downtown area, was even more favorable to the incumbent.

Altho present appearance are that Judge Curtis will be re-elected Nov. 6, by a substantial majority, R. A. McGann, prominent San Diego civic worker and business man who is directing Judge Curtis' campaign, said that while the results of the straw ballots were highly gratifying, there would be no let-up in the campaign work.

New Books at Library

The Ocean Beach Branch Library has just received an outstanding order of new books. Many valuable non-fiction reference books as well as popular fiction are among them.

001 Short history of California—one volume complete and comprehensive history of California by Hunt and Sanchez.
130 Secret Springs by O'Higgins.
339 Boy and girl tramps of America—a short description of this timely book appeared in the Reader's Digest entitled "Children of the Jungle".
347 Putnam's handy law book for the layman by Bolles.
383 Scotts standard postage stamp catalogue for 1935.
572 Atlantis by Donnelly—an old book but an interesting companion book to Churchward's "Continent of Mu" which was a recent addition to the library.
621.9 Machine shop work by Turner.
622 Placer gold mining and prospecting by Sur. Copyrighted 1934.
622 How and where to find gold by Transon. Copyrighted 1934.
669 Metals by Collins.
These last three books are in great demand since mining has come back into the public interest.
770 Photography for fun by Strong.
690 Kidder-Parker architects and builders handbook by Kidder.
929.4 Internationalbook of names by Mawson.
940 Rise of the House of Rothschild by Corti. This is the movie edition with George Arliss illustrations.
B Rosalie Evans letters from Mexico.
B Second house from the corner by This is by our popular San Diego author, Max Miller, as enjoyable as his first book "I cover the waterfront" and written in the same journalistic style.

Drive Autumn chills away

● Changing fall temperatures bring the need for convenient heat . . . heat that can be turned on for ten minutes or an entire evening, and turned off at a moment's notice. And that's a condition for which the Gas Radiant Heater is ideally suited.

Just strike a match, turn on the gas, and an instant flood of glowing heat carries warmth and cheer to every corner of the room. There's no fuss . . . no bother . . . no fuel to carry in or ashes to carry out. And there's no waste, because the minute you're warm enough, off it goes at the touch of a finger.

A Gas Radiant Heater will save fuel in your regular heating system . . . will prevent colds and attendant ills . . . will bring comfort and cheer to every member of the family.

Your Gas Appliance dealer is planning special inducements to demonstrate the economy of gas heat this winter. Watch for his advertisements.
